

This Week's D6 Family Theme: Restoration

Go to a forest or park with your child and admire the beautiful trees and the colorful leaves. Talk with your child about the changing of leaves. Although the leaves are dying and the trees will soon be bare, they don't stay that way. When spring comes, brand new green leaves will grow right where the old ones had been. God does the same in our lives. Once we confess our sins, He forgives us, restores our souls, heals our hurts, and repairs our hearts. Say a prayer with your child and thank God for restoring you.

God of the little things

It's easy to reckon that God
Is God of the cosmic field,
Where swiftly through ages unlocked
The numberless worlds have wheeled
The God of the fiery red suns,
And God of each gleaming star
And God of the awful unknown
Beyond where the worlds are!
Yet He watches the sparrows that fall
And sees that the ravens are fed!
He clothes the grass of the field
And number the hair on my head!
He looks at the children at play
And with kingship He crowns them all!
The God of the mightiest things
Is the God of the weak and small!
He poured out the thundering sea
And piles up the peaks that stand;
Yet He fashions each drop of dew,
He molded each grain of sand.
Ah, this is the thought of my heart
While faith in my spirit sings:
The God of the infinite great
Is God of the little things.
